culated to create a hearty laugh. GROVER'S THEATER - The Warren comedy combination enter upon the second and last week of their engagement at Grover's. Last week was a brilliant one at this popular resort; and Mr. Wm. Warren gave evidence that he has lost none of his fine powers as a comedian. To-night he appears as "Bob Acres," in "The Rivals," and will be supported as usual, by the whole company.

JANTERBURY HALL .- Mr. Lea announces a new attraction in the person of Mr. John Denier, a daring gymnas, who will perform many daring feats. The enchanting danseuses, Mil-lie and Clara Fowler, and the other old performers remain, and entirely new acts are announced for to-night HAMBUJER, the great magician, will com-mence a series of magical entertainments at Odd Fellows' Hall, 7th street, to-night. He performs many wonderful acts, and always succeeds in pleasantly mystifying his audiences. Hambujer proposes to give but three entertainments here.

THE CANVASS .- Meeting of the Lincoln and Johnson Club - The Union Men Happy - Office. holders to be Required to Toe the Mark, and no Dodging -The Lincoln and Johnson Club held a spirited meeting on Saturday night; the members feeling particularly frisky in view of the muss amongst the democracy.

The Chair (Mr. Clephane) stated that this organization (club) did not interfere in any way with State organizations, and they should be glad to have members of State organizations join with them. At the meeting of the executive committee on the previous evening it had been recommended that the club hold nightly meetings, and they hoped to have at least one prominent speaker at each meeting. Mr. Coombs thought this was beginning rather rank, and that they would fail in getting an audience at nightly meetings. They had better begin with two or three a week, and try

Mr. T. B. Brown hoped they would meet every night. It would hardly look well if they allowed themselves to be surpassed by the opposite party, who were holding nightly meetings, keeping the excitement up and taking in new members. They ought to be able to do the same, and the time was short,-only two that experiment.

Mr. Coombs would not like to be behind the Democratic Association in enterprise, but still thought the nightly meeting a doubtful experiment. He would offer an amendment to hold three meetings a week.

Mr. M. L. Story (Pension Bureau.) would like to ask if this was the way to get up a revival! Next to the salvation of the soul was the salvation of the Union. The next two menths would decide whether we are to be a nation. Let them get up a revival and not count their converts before they commenced. but get up their revival and the converts would come in. [Applause]

The ticket opposed to them was composed of two Georges. In revolutionary times we rose against one George, but he was not half so dirty and half so mean as the Georges we oppose tonight. [Laughter and applause. They knew something of McClellan and if he were elected and died what kind of a President would Pengleton make! He had asked the question of a McClellan man in this city, who answered that McClellan had been examined by a physician and pronounced constitutionally good. [Great laughter] He had told the Mc lellan man that Mac being idle migh be fatting up, but that there was danger of his dying of apoplexy. [Renewed When Fremont wanted to run for the Presidency he had at least sense enough to resign his commission and there was that much gained. He had had some hope that McClellan would do the same, but perhaps McClellan thinks he has so little chance to be elected that he means to hold on to his commission [Laughter.] Mr. Coombs professed himself convinced by the eloquence of the gentleman who had taken so discursive a flight, and withdre w his amend-The recommendation of the executive committee to meet nightly was then adopted. Mr Clephane announced that the new flag of the club would be unfurled from the building on Thursday evening next. He hoped every member of the club would take pains to bring in new members. Not only every man in office should come into their ranks, but also every business man who intends to support Mr. Lincoln. Lines must be drawn, and there was no better way than by means of the roll of ine club. [Cheers.]

Mr. E. Lycett hoped measures would be taken to fling their flag to the breeze across Pennsylvania avenue [Applause.] Mr. Clephane said that a flag as large, if not larger, than the Democratic flag would soon be thrown ont on the avenue. The flag of their German fellow-citizens would be flung out at 7th street, from the Avenue House

Mr. Geo. E. Sharrets hoped that when allusion was made to their opponents that their proper designation of copperheads would be applied to them. [Applause.]

Mr. Elvans said it was requisite to secure a club room. The present room could be got for $75 per month, and no room could be more suitable, it having for a long time been the headquarters of the Union men.

Mr. Henshaw .- Will that give the club exclusive use of the room ! Mr. Clephane - Yes, for evening meetings.

The committee were authorized to rent the Subscriptions were announced to be in order. Mr. Henry Janney contributed 85 towards the purchase of a flag on Pennsylvania

The names of 43 new members were placed on the books at this time, or in the course of the evening, among whom were J. L. Henshaw, A. J. K. Baker, I. G. Adams, C. H. Lemon, James Topham, H. N. Miller, "H. C.

Fowler and Mary Fowler, $2," &c. Mr. J. S. Brown gave some encouraging accounts of the Union cause in the North, where he had been traveling. There had been a hapby change in sentiment in the New England States since the capture of Atlanta. Vermont had already spoken for herself, and Maine would do so next week. In New York he had found leading merchants who had heretofore been ardent democrats, now declaring their purpose to go for Abraham Lincoln and the Union party. The great commercial interest of New York was identified with the preservation of the Union, and would go for Lincoln. Two-thirds of the soldiers would go for him. No man who has a greenback in his pocket will give support to a platform so damaging to the material interests of the coun. try as the Chicago platform. He was informed from high authority that Fremont would soon take his name out of the way. [Cheers.] And another distinguished gentleman, whose position had been somewhat antagonistic to that of Mr. Lincoln, would give him hearty sup-

Mr. Fester, of Kansas, made some remarks, and was followed by-Mr. Fielder R. Dorsett (of the First Ward) who said that the departments were filled with secessionists. Mr Lincoln had been deceived awfully. There was a man in office who openly expressed his joy at the capture of Sumter by the rebels, and this man had been promoted from a $1,200 clerkship to be chief of a bureau. If Mr. Lincoln would re. move all such from office be would be reelected by an overwhelming majority: but if he did not, he would be defeated. In the case referred to he had been seven times to the Department to see the Secretary in regard to this man, but could not get an interview. He thought a committee should be appointed to wait on the President in regard to the matter.

Mr. Elvans said that while the facts were undoubtedly as stated, he thought the remedy proposed was a wrong one. The remedy was with themselves. If an employee of Government feels it his duty to vote for McClellan let him do so, but at the same time let him resign. [Applause.] It is our duty to watch, and it the Department employees do not come up and sign our constitution they should be removed.

[Applause]

He believed that nine tenths of the old business residents of Washington are—he would not say disloyal, but opposed to the administration. [A voice—"that's so!"] No business man has a right to the patronage of the Government if he is not willing to support the Government. And it was requisite that those who joined them should do so at once. He would suspect any clerks who come in after the October election. Some time ago at a meeting a gentleman wished all who were for Aoraham Lincoln to rise so that the lines might be drawn. He did not see that gentleman present now. [A vrice—"He's a clerk."]

If these men do not come forward and stand with us, we must take it for granted they are against us. We must watch these men and see that they get their just deserts.

Mr. Dorsett said he had been to the Department seven times, required by the scripture in regard to the case he re erred to, and he thought he had done his duty.

Mr. Elvans -You should go according to scripture, 70 times 7, if not successful. [Laugh-Mr. Wm. S. Morse, with all due deference. thought they were too apt to find fault with to canvass the chara ter of every man in office. It there are any bad ones, the attempt should be made to convert them to the right. [Faint applause.] He believed this club had higher duties to perform than to make charges against the administration, and he believed that the charges would recoil against themselves. He believed that Abraham Lincoin would be re-elected by the largest vote ever given, and that but two or three States would vote for George B. McUlellan and treason! [Applause.]

It had been said that Fremont had with drawn. For his part he had never heard of the first man who intended to vote for him. Like the Irishman in the well bucket, he had cut the rope to spite the man above him. [Laughter and cheers.] There was talk about the army vote. Well he had had some experience in the army, and he would assert that McCiellan would not get one-fi th of the army vote. Not two men out of five of the present army ever served under McClellan an hour, and one half of those would thank God if they never had served under him! [Cheers.] And they kn-w that the Democratic party, if it succeeds, will never be the friend of the soldier. [Cheers.] This country will never consent to a dishonorable peace. The bones of our noble dead in Virginia will cry out against it. [Applause.] Mr. J S. Brown said the administration were not responsible it copperheads got position. In ninety nine cases out of a hundred the appointments are made through the influence of members of Congress. [Cries "that's If a copperhead gets a place there Mr. Lincoln is not responsible, but the member of Congress who recommends him, and those citizens, supposed to be loyal, who endorsed Mr. Dorsett said he intended no attack upon the President who he believed was all right.

But he had thought it his duty to state facts within his knowledge. Mr. Coombs said it was perhaps because he was older and had been beat-n sev-ral times that he was less sanguine than some who had spoken. He believed Mr. Lincoln would be elected, but it would be necessary for them to work earnestly to secure his election. If he is not elected triumphantly it will be because a large number of the people of the United States labor under a great delusion. George B. McClellan cannot make a decent show in this canvass, if he does not get the vote of a large number of people, who are heartily in favor of maintaining the union, and who are deceived by his plausible letter. It is our duty to disseminate correct views as to the effect of putting into power - not George B McClellan, but the party that nominated him. They could do more by disseminating documents than by these meetings which, however, are all very well.

Did they ever hear copperheads-the opponents of Mr Lincoln-say a word about our victories at Atlanta and Mobile? [Cries, "No!"

Have they not received the news of all such Union successes with infinite chagrin? ["Yes!" 'Yes!' Did you ever hear a speaker at a copperhead meeting speak in terms of disapprobation, even of Jeff Davis and his crew! indeed!"] We hear plenty of censure at their hands of this Administration, but never a word of censure for Jeff Davis and his gang! The people of the country must be made to see that to put that party in power would be fatal to our national interests.

Mr. Z. Richards said he held a paper containing six names, accompanied by $6, of parties who wished to become members of this club. Let us see how many names we can get individually in our particular sphere. Let us ask every man, from the highest to the lowest, for his name and dollar. This will enable us to draw lines and find out who are really the friends of the Administration. [Cheers.] He thought it was not profitable to find fault with what the Administration had done. His experience had been, in going to heads of Da. partments to complain of the appointment of disloyal men, that the reply would be: "Why, S-nator so and so recommended them, and when they have been turned out here, they have been reappointed elsewhere through the same recommendations." ["That's so!"] Greater care should be taken in giving recom-

Mr. Elvans suggested that Mr. Richards's as their law required the signature to their constitution of all members. Mr. Clements said that there were parties in the departments who would give a dollar and sign "Cash," but who could not be induced to come here and sign for Lincoln and John-Mr. Clephane said that it might answer if the party sending his money would give anthority to sign his name, but it would be better if all came up and signed. A gentleman here stated that the six persons mentioned by Mr. Richards were employees at the Treasury Department, and they would have come up to sign but were on duty that Mr. Richards thought it would be a good idea. to circulate printed copies of the constitution for signatures amongst those not able to attend

The suggestion was adopted. Mr. Lycett.-I hope our meetings will not be like the copperhead meetings on the avenue. where Tom Florence is 1st and Dr. Clayton 2d one night, and Dr. Clayton 1st and Tom Florence 2d another night [Great laughter.] He hoped they would have tresh speakers every night.

Mr. Clephane said the names of speakers would be announced. The meeting then adjourned with three tremendous cheers and "a tiger" for "Sherman," ditto for "Grant," ditto for "our soldiers," ditto for "Abraham Lincoln."
